

Humic substances are complex, essentially aromatic, heteropolycondensates of large "molecular" size which are produced by bacterial degradation of and synthesis from plant and animal residues in the soil