

BEN LOMOND / ROYAL GEORGE GRANITE ANALYSED SAMPLE LOCALITIES

J.L. Everard

- Quaternary alluvium
- Quaternary talus
- Tertiary basalt
- Jurassic dolerite
- Permo - Triassic sedimentary rocks
- Devonian granite
- Ordovician(?) - Devonian(?) quartz - turbidite - sequence (Mathinna Beds)
- Geological boundary
- Fault
- Major mine (Abandoned)

- | | |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| BEN LOMOND <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ Equigranular to variably porphyritic (K-feldspar) granite with a medium to coarse-grained groundmass (Dlac). ◆ Equigranular to variably porphyritic (K-feldspar) granite with a fine to medium-grained groundmass (Dlaf). ▲ Variably porphyritic (quartz and K-feldspar) granite with a fine-grained groundmass (Dlg). ⊙ Fine-grained phyric microgranite (Dlgm). * Quartz feldspar porphyry | ROYAL GEORGE <ul style="list-style-type: none"> □ Equigranular to variably porphyritic (K-feldspar) granite with a medium to coarse-grained groundmass (Dlac). ◇ Equigranular to variably porphyritic (K-feldspar) granite with a fine to medium-grained groundmass (Dlaf). △ Variably porphyritic (quartz and K-feldspar) granite with a fine-grained groundmass (Dlg). ⊙ Fine-grained phyric microgranite (Dlgm). * Quartz feldspar porphyry |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

